

EcoVadis Platinum medal: delfort receives top sustainability rating for the fifth consecutive year

(Traun, 23. March 2026). delfort, a leading global developer and manufacturer of specialty papers, has once again been awarded Platinum status by the EcoVadis rating platform – for the fifth time in a row. This award is granted to only one percent of companies currently assessed worldwide. With a score of 89 out of a possible 100 points, delfort reaffirms its commitment to responsible and sustainable business practices.

“Earning five consecutive Platinum awards is a remarkable achievement,” says Hannes Kinast, COO of delfort. To remain among the long-term industry leaders, continuous progress and measurable improvement are essential. This year, delfort not only maintained its Platinum status but also increased its score to 89 points.

The company performed well in all four EcoVadis categories: Environment, Labor & Human Rights, Sustainable Procurement, and Corporate Ethics. The most significant progress was made in the ethics category, driven by enhanced IT security measures, strengthened anti-corruption guidelines, and comprehensive compliance training programs. “The EcoVadis Platinum award reflects the joint commitment of our employees and the trust of our customers, with whom we are working together towards a more sustainable future,” says Kinast.

Science-based climate action reinforces delfort’s EcoVadis rating

A key pillar of delfort’s sustainability strategy is its net-zero roadmap, which outlines validated, science-based climate targets under the Science Based Targets initiative (SBTi) Net Zero Standard. The roadmap defines concrete measures to reduce emissions across the entire company. Building on this foundation, delfort has recently commissioned the world’s largest heat pump, enabling one of its production sites to operate entirely fossil-free.

“This marks a significant milestone for us, complementing the continuous efficiency gains we are achieving through modern technologies, further electrification, and investments in sustainable in-house energy generation. The renewed EcoVadis Platinum rating confirms that we are among the global leaders in sustainability management and performance — and underlines our commitment to achieving net zero emissions,” says Kinast.
